

Recently, Google announced the decision to sunset Google+. With the strong challenges of maintaining the expectations of Facebook, Twitter, Instagram users, Google + wasn't gaining much popularity. The declining use of the platform made Google to sunset the Google + platform.

Google is placing the deadline near the end of August 2019. Meanwhile, the company will launch new features for the enterprise version of the same service as early as this week.

That's a platform for communication within large companies, built around the same concepts that defined the consumer version of Google Plus.

This may affect with your website outbound links if any.

And may show broken links and affect website SEO.

So better remove such links if any as soon as possible.

Are you worried about the post sharing. Dont worry. Google allows to share your recent posts on your local listing pages from Google businesses. So update your users with recent posts from your local listings, maps, directions and reviews.

I don't think many of us are going to miss Google plus all that much. Surely, there will be something new on the horizon to take it's place before too long.
